Rennes, at the heart of transitions

Just 1 hour 25 minutes from Paris by train, the Breton capital is committed to being a resilient region that ensures quality of life, with a pedestrian city center and an efficient, 100% accessible public transportation network.

When the metropolis commits...

To achieve its goal of reducing greenhouse gases by 40% by 2030, Rennes Métropole is strongly committed to transitions. The adoption of its climate plan places the fight against climate change and the transition to a "post-carbon" region at the heart of public policies in order to improve air quality and quality of life by offering concrete solutions to public and private stakeholders, and residents.

...Destination Rennes takes action. Since its inception, Destination Rennes has been committed to a corporate social responsibility approach with the aim of not opposing attractiveness and sustainability. ISO 20121 certification and the Sustainable Innovative Destination label highlight the implementation of reliable processes within the company and concrete actions to raise awareness and empower economic stakeholders, tourists, and conference attendees regarding eco-responsible issues.

A vital role in the regional economy

With a network of nearly 40,000 institutions, Rennes Métropole plays a vital role in the regional economy. It boasts a dense research ecosystem, a rich educational offering, and a high quality of life. It boasts dynamism at every level. Rennes stands out in key economic sectors such as digital technology, healthcare, cybersecurity, cultural and creative industries, food, and mobility. A city of transitions, it also attracts innovative companies committed to new production methods. These many strengths regularly rank it among the top three most attractive French cities.

University/Research

With 73,500 students, two universities, and 17 grandes écoles, Rennes is the leading center of higher education and research in the Greater West of France. Ranked annually among the top three best French student cities by L'Etudiant magazine, it is renowned for its student life and the wide variety of its educational offerings, spanning multiple sectors, some of which are renowned for their excellence. If Rennes has boasted a remarkable economic performance in recent years, it is largely thanks to the ability of its various stakeholders—campuses, research units, and companies of all sizes and from various sectors—particularly in the digital, health, and food sectors—to work and innovate together.
